Each year, America produces approximately 258 million tons of trash – over 4lbs per person per day, enough to reach the moon and back 25 times. While around a third of this waste is recycled or composted, the rest ends up being incinerated or in a landfill. Diverting waste from landfills prevents the emission of greenhouse gases including carbon dioxide and methane into the air, as well as prevents the production of leachate, a liquid that contains dissolved environmentally harmful substances.

HELP PREVENT LANDFILL BY:

Buying items made of recycled content and reusing them as much as you can

Donating clothing and shopping at second-hand stores

Using rechargeable batteries

Using a sturdy, refillable water bottle

Carrying reusable bags and containers for shopping, traveling, or packing lunches

Buying in bulk rather than individual packaging

Purchasing items such as dish soap and laundry detergent in concentrate forms

Opting out of unsolicited mail such as credit card offers
